Mrs. Floyd,

This year I have learned quite a lot about myself as it pertains to engineering. First of all I reaffirmed my love for engineering and my desire to pursue this career path. I also learned that I excel at the business and thinking side of engineering while at times I lack in the motivation to document my every move. I guess I want to roll with the idea I have so it takes a lot for me to slow down and ensure all my work has been correctly documented. So far I would grade myself a low A as I have been generating extremely quality work but I am behind in my documentation due to lapses in motivation. This ties in with my ethics. I have likely lacked in this area as my documentation hasn't always been as conclusive as possible. So far I would grade my products as A's as they have been of the upmost quality but they haven't always been on schedule.

It has been a delight working with Noah this year. I have learned that he is a passionate worker and learner. He has struggled at times simply due to the fact he isn't as versed in the track and field community as I may be but he is quick and eager to learn. I would grade him at a high level very similar to mine. Where he lacks in the knowledge and thinking of the project he makes up for in his work ethic. His ethics are top tier as his documentation make up for mine. I would grade his work an A.

The hardest part of the project so far has been the documentation. It is a lot of work and has been a struggle for me to stay on top of. The hardest part of working with Noah has been not getting distracted as we are rather close already and can tend to veer off course.

The easiest part of the project for me has been the contact with professionals. I think it is fun and exciting which gives me a lot of motivation to get it done as fast as possible. The easiest part of working with Noah has been communicating with him. We have communicated and worked extremely well together.

In order to be successful second semester I plan on organizing my website and binder better for easier documentation. This should help me with the biggest struggle I've been facing.

Lastly, if I were to get anyone a gift this holiday season I would give my mom a certificate for a spa day because she deserves it for all the work she does for me.

Sincerely,

Tyler Jordan Nolan
